Goal and intended audience

This program is specifically planned to meet the needs of physicians, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, nurses and all healthcare professionals who are dedicated to providing the best possible care for patients with cardiovascular disease in the primary care setting.

Objectives

1. Describe the role of risk factors for heart disease in women and men and apply preventative and diagnostic approaches to diagnose heart disease.
2. Recognize clinical signs and symptoms of heart failure, treatment thereof, and identify when patients with heart failure should be referred for advanced therapies.
3. Describe the epidemiology of atrial fibrillation, identify risk factors and review recent guidelines for anticoagulation of patients with atrial fibrillation.
4. Define the natural history of aortic stenosis in conjunction with outlining the indications, recommendations, and limitations of TAVR.
